Women of intelligence often find themselves trapped in a Double Bind. As they strive to achieve professional success and recognition, they still feel societal pressure to assume more conventional roles. In this book, Alice Rowe explores this dichotomy in the lives of 34 smart women. Although cultural sexism is a consistent theme in their stories, so is strength, determination, and inspiration. This is an enlightening portrayal of smart women in our culture. More importantly, it encourages women to celebrate their innate intelligence and abilities.
